Assistant Engineer – Business Partners

Who are you, and where were you born?

I am Tselane. I was born in Limpopo and raised in Pretoria.

Provide one word that describes you

Dynamic.

When did you develop an interest in what would become your career?

When my dad worked for Eskom, he would come home with the pamphlets about Electro-wise. (If I remember correctly), they portrayed the dangers of electricity. I hated the work he did! That's right, I hated it. I hated it so much, only to grow up and electricity being the only thing I knew, from wiring homes to fixing irons. I was always cautious of electricity. Although, that does not signify being an engineer, I fell into Electrical Engineering by default. It was not limited to the trivial things I used to do; it was broad. I loved the flexibility from field to field.

What motivated you in the discipline?

My mother, she always believed that the only limitation between you and your goals, is you!

The person that influenced my life, is my mother. She believed in every dream.

The person that Influenced my career progression is a former manager/mentor who took a chance on me in the mining field.

What might someone be surprised to know about you?

I mix herbs and leaves.

No, not the illegal kind. Tea making particularly.

What is your life philosophy?

"Someone did it, it can be done. The question is how?"

What do you enjoy doing in your spare time?

Hiking, running, collecting tea, reading and planning trips I'm afraid to take!

Where do you see South Deep in the next five years?

Considering South Deep's trajectory since 2018, a revered gold producer.

How is South Deep going to get there?

By applying consistency in the current efforts that they have initiated moving the company forward from what it was prior to 2019, to what it is now, and that is through culture. Culture motivates people, and our business is to motivate people.
